Force Protection Video Expands Product Line

Force Protection Video Equipment (OTCQB: FPVD), which sells HD body camera systems and accessories for law enforcement, announced today that it has incorporated a wholly-owned subsidiary, CobraXtreme HD Corp., a North Carolina Corporation.

The purpose of the subsidiary will be to sell HD videos sports cameras and accessories which are similar to those sold by GoPro. We will also sell video goggles and sunglass cameras. The company has already set up a website to sell its products at www.cobraxtremeHD.com. It also has a Facebook page CobraXtreme.

The company's president, Paul Feldman, was previously associated with a company which sold similar products and had revenues of approximately $450,000 per year. Mr. Feldman commented on the formation of CobraXtreme HD as follows: "We decided that it was time to expand our product list, and with my previous experience in this field, plus all my years As CEO of Law Enforcement Associates, I believe that FPVD will be able to expand into more diverse and lucrative markets. We intend to commence these business segments right away."

The Force Protection Video LE10 and LE50 cameras are rugged HD design which incorporates Ambarella (NASDAQ: AMBA) made chips that allow cameras and other devices to record high definition video. It is the chip supplier of the popular GoPro® (NASDAQ: GPRO) sports cameras.
